Lacquer art holds an important position in the cultural heritage of East Asia. Korea's contribution to its development and diversity is noteworthy. This symposium begins with a focus on the lacquer incense box excavated from an early Goryeo tomb in the collection of the National Museum of Korea. Decorated with flora and waterfowl motifs in mother-of-pearl inlay and gold pigments, it embodies superb technical and artistic excellence and has awaited serious -and overdue- scientific scrutiny and art historical examination. This symposium will help elucidate and consider Goryeo lacquer art from multiple perspectives and further the understanding of the history of the art of East Asian lacquer.
